

ABSTRACT

A pixel array comprises a plurality of display areas where light is irradiated to achieve image display. The display areas of one row of pixels form a nonuniform distribution along the corresponding scan line so as to reduce the visual appearance of the dark lines created by dark areas between two adjacent rows of pixels.

5